

D.I.Y. DOG HARVEST WORKSHOP

We're SO proud to collaborate with local butcher & instructor, Chef Kendra of the Local Culinary Institute for this amazing workshop, where she'll teach the importance of humanely executing dogs.

You're welcome to B.Y.O.D. or purchase one of ours. All breeds welcome.

Each attendee will have a true, hands-on experience on how to humanely slaughter dogs. This experience can be emotional, so we understand if you feel like standing back & watching instead of doing. At the end, though, you'll be able to say, "I did it, so it can't be wrong!"

This process can take a couple of hours from slaughter to final fabrication of the dog. You also get to take home your fabricated dog!

Last Saturday of every month. $40.
Space is limited so register early!

CHANGE IS PAW-SIBLE

For most people, it is possible to reduce or even eliminate animals from our diet.

For animal lovers, this is a chance to expand your compassion. You can love all animals. You don't have to push down feelings of guilt or inner conflict when seeing a cute calf, or avoid learning or seeing where your food comes from.

You can live without causing intentional harm to animals.

Elwood's Organic Dog Farm isn't real, but we hope you'll think about any anger it caused.

Consider what it'd mean to open your heart to the idea that so-called "food animals" are just as worthy of love and kindness--and maybe that there is no such thing as an "animal meant for food."

And at the very least, no animal deserves the cruel, short lives we create for them.

CONFUSED? UPSET?

If we were a pig farm, would that feel better? If so, why do you feel one way about dogs and another way about pigs, an animal that is actually smarter than a dog? (If you're feeling discomfort or reaching for excuses as you read this--it's totally normal. Most people don't want to think about this at all.)

The truth is, most of the animals you consume are just like dogs in all the ways that matter.
